The Effects of Alcohol. Experiments go to show that alcohol is not a stimulant, that its final effect everywhere is depressive and inhibitory, that, in short, it is properly to be classed with the anesthetics and narcotics, says Dr. Henry Smith Williams in the October McClure's Experiment shows that alcohol does indeed stimulate the flow of digestive fluids, but that it also tends to interfere with their normal action; so that ordinarily one effect neutralizes the other. As regards the action on the heart, the ultimate effect of alcohol is to depress, in large cases, to paralyze that organ. Dr. Williams continues: "The experiments show that alcohol does not increase the capacity to do muscular work, but distinctly decreases it. Doubtless this seems at variance with many a man's observation of himself; but the explanation is found in the fact that alcohol blurs the judgment. As Voit remarks, it gives, not strength, but, at most, the feeling of strength. A man may think he is working faster and better under the influence of alcohol than he would otherwise do; but rigidly conducted experiments do not confirm this opinion. 'Both science and the experience of life,' says Dr. John J. Abel, of Johns Hopkins University, have exploded the pernicious theory that alcohol gives any persistent increase of muscular power. The disappearance of this universal error will greatly reduce the consumption of alcohol among laboring men. It is well understood by all who control large bodies of men engaged in physical labor that alcohol and effective work are incompatible."

A Russian count, who is spending the summer on Lake George has probably come to the conclusion that a title is not all it is cracked up to be in this country. He tried to bluff out an arrest for speeding in an automobile the other day but failed and drew a gun. Now he is out on $1000 bond.

Mis or Mr.? "Fighting Bob" Evans, during his last stay in Washington, was one evening a guest at a house where he met a number of the younger set of the Capital.

As the admiral was leaving, he chanced to pick up from the floor a very dainty handkerchief, edged with lace. He was gravely inspecting this "trifle light as air," when a rather effeminate-looking young man hastened forward to claim it. "Your sister's, no doubt," said the admiral as he handed it over. "Oh, no," said the young man; "it's mine."

Evans scrutinized the young man closely. "Would you mind telling me what size hair pins you use?" he asked after a pause.—October Lippincott's.
